- the language of a translation furnished for the purposes of international preliminary examination (under Rule 55.2 and/or 55.3).

3. With regard to any nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence disclosed in the international application, the international preliminary examination was carried out on the basis of the sequence listing:

- contained in the international application in written form.
- filed together with the international application in computer readable form.
- furnished subsequently to this Authority in written form.
- furnished subsequently to this Authority in computer readable form.
- The statement that the subsequently furnished written sequence listing does not go beyond the disclosure in the international application as filed has been furnished.

1. The questions whether the claimed invention appears to be novel, to involve an inventive step (to be non-obvious), or to be industrially applicable have not been examined in respect of:

the entire international application,

claims Nos. 15-20

because:

the description, claims or drawings (indicate particular elements below) or said claims Nos. 15-20 are so unclear that no meaningful opinion could be formed (specify):

the claims, or said claims Nos. are so inadequately supported by the description that no meaningful opinion could be formed.

no international search report has been established for the said claims Nos.

2. A meaningful international preliminary examination cannot be carried out due to the failure of the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence listing to comply with the standard provided for in Annex C of the Administrative Instructions:

the written form has not been furnished or does not comply with the Standard.

the computer readable form has not been furnished or does not comply with the Standard.

Re Section III

Claims 15-20 contain references to the description and/or drawings. According to rule 6.2(a) PCT, claims should not contain such references except where absolutely necessary, which is not the case here.

Re Section V

The invention concerns a rotary engine having an impeller with outer chambers open to the periphery of the impeller and being circumferentially spaced around the impeller, and into which chambers jets of working fluid flow can be directed from inlet openings in the periphery of the casing surrounding the impeller.

A rotary engine of this kind is disclosed in the prior art document US-A-3 737 248.

None of the prior art documents cited in the international search report discloses an impeller having further chambers located radially inwards of the peripherally located chambers, corresponding inner and outer chambers being connected by means of a passage which can take the form of a venturi, through which passage the working fluid is communicable.

Neither the fluid flow actuated drive means according to claim 1, nor the method of rotating a body according to independent claim 13 can be considered obvious in the light of the disclosures of the cited documents, whether taken alone or in combination.

The dependent claims 2-12 and 14 respectively define further advantageous embodiments which are all novel and supported by an inventive step.
